Summary

The higher top of Friday's candle implies upward movement, but we have to look at the candle in context.

The candle looks similar to Monday's candle because the closing price is close to open, just 5 points different, implying an indecisive candle.

However, the FTSE closes below Pivot S1, below EMA level 1 and closes below Thursday's candle (only just). Furthermore, as the close was below the open then technically that is a bearish candle. Added to this is also the fact that the body of the candle is below the halfway point of the wick; and that's why it is not indecisive.

These contextual facts imply further downward movement tomorrow, despite Friday's high being the highest of the week.

Any news out of Eastern Europe will sway the results as has been the case for the past few weeks.
